

Nikolas Katsimpras

Columbia University

Nikolas is an adjunct faculty member at the Negotiation and Conflict Resolution masters program of Columbia University, of which he is also an alumnus, and a conflict resolution lab instructor at the School of International and Public Affairs.

He has been involved with the work of the Advanced Consortium on Cooperation and Conflict Resolution since 2012. He is a former Lieutenant of the Hellenic Navy, with numerous international and national deployments, and in 2004 he was awarded by the International Institute for Humanitarian Law, based in San Remo, Italy. Nikolas is also a freelance consultant on organizational management, focusing on organizational culture and effective conflict resolution in the workplace. He contributes frequently on Huffington Post, along with the Hellenic American Leadership Council, and is passionate about technology and interdisciplinary thinking.